

Crossing Borders: Teaching Language, Teaching Peace

Description: This video conference discusses a rationale and creative activities for teaching foreign languages while also teaching peace. Teaching peace in language courses can enhance the existing language curriculum. The video conference is based on Oxford's two peace books (The Language of Peace and Understanding Peace Cultures), peace workshops, and international research on integrating peace into foreign language education. Participants in the video conference can request free instructional materials, activities, and support for peace teaching in language courses or language teacher preparation courses. If interested, they can also signify their desire to join a collaborative research study.